

Acknowledgement to the Reviewers

We place on record our sincerest thanks to a large number of reviewers (vide infra) whose critical reviews of the manuscripts submitted to this issue have added a great value to Journal of Medical Arthropodology & Public Health.

The exceptional developments during past two years in the wake of COVID-19 pandemic, the impact of which is still trailing in the form of a new strain, Omicron, at the time of publishing this issue, have reinforced the critical importance of peer review and we want to express our gratitude for your work as a referee. Without your tireless efforts, it would have been impossible to publish so many high-quality papers that have advanced human knowledge in this uncertain time. And without your dedication, we would never have been able to share those findings as rapidly. It would be our honoured pleasure to continue receiving your cooperation in future as well.

Once again, thank you for your ongoing support. Let us close by sending our very best regards to you and your family and wishing you well for the year ahead.

With best wishes,

Editorial Board,

Journal of Medical Arthropodology & Public Health
